

HARRIMAN ROUTS FISH IN FIGHT FOR ILLINOIS CENTRAL

Court Rules 286,231 Shares of Stock in Dispute Can Be Voted at Annual Meeting.

RAILROAD IN NO DANGER

Charges Made Against the Union Pacific Magnate Not Proved, Judge Rules.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—E. H. Harriman today gained a complete victory in the Illinois Central litigation, which has been in the Supreme Court since last October. Judge Ball today rendered a decision dissolving the temporary injunction granted to Stuyvesant Fish by which 286,231 shares of stock were enjoined from being voted at the annual meeting of the Illinois Central Railroad Company.

Thus the stock which is held by the Union Pacific Railroad Company and the Railroad Securities Company of New Jersey City can now be voted at the annual meeting, which will be held in this city March 22.

10,000 Word Decision.

The decision of Judge Ball was quite extended, amounting to about 10,000 words. After citing the history of the case, and going at considerable length into the various claims and assertions made by both sides, the Court went on to say:

"The only thing averred and proved in this case as to the future actions of the defendants is that at the coming election the Union Pacific and the Railroad Securities Company will vote the stock they own and control for the reelection of the present directors, each of whom has served the Illinois Central acceptably for many years, and for a fourth director, in place of Mr. Fish, a competent man, who is not in any way connected with the Union Pacific."

"No act prejudicial to the Illinois Central or to its stockholders is shown to have been done unless the mere fact that the Union Pacific and the Railroad Securities Company own 29 percent of the stock of the Illinois Central be considered to be so. Since the retirement of Mr. Fish from the presidency of the company has been the same, and its executive officers, with one exception caused by death, have remained the same from that day to this."

Not Evidence in This Case.

"While Mr. Fish may rightfully desire to remain a director of the Illinois Central, and to that end may use every lawful means in the power of himself and his friends, he has no right to that office unless he is legally elected thereto. Hence, his defeat, if it comes from the lack of valid votes, is no legal injury to the civil or property rights of Fish or those of his fellow complainants."

DECISION IS GOOD FOR WHOLE COUNTRY SAYS HARRIMAN.

The news of the Illinois Central decision was given to Mr. Harriman by an Evening World reporter who met him just as he was entering his office. The grizzled mustache of the financier raised as his lips formed a smile, and he said:

"I am, of course, deeply gratified. I regard the decision as an important and beneficial act to the whole country. My strongest hope is that it is clean cut and will remove any doubts on the question. Until I have read the text of the decision I cannot discuss it further."

Mr. Harriman was then asked what he thought of the letter of the President to the Interstate Commerce Commission concerning the act of the railroad in arranging to cut wages. He replied:

"This is a matter between employers and employees and it will be settled in a manner satisfactory to both sides unless there is unwarranted interference. The President's letter is certain to be harmful."

"Anything that continues to stir up strife and animosity between labor and capital is bound to do harm. We can't do anything until we have a chance to do permanent financing. What we want to do now is to get our men back to work at once and I shall certainly make that my effort."

At the office of Stuyvesant Fish it was said that Mr. Fish would make no comment on the case until he had seen the text of the decision.

CHINESE DRIVE JAPS FROM MANCHURIAN TOWNS.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 20.—Advices have been received in Portland from Hong Kong and other Chinese cities that a species of guerrilla warfare has broken out in Manchuria between the Japanese soldiers who make up the army of occupation and the native Chinese, who are bent on driving out of the country the representatives of the power whom they fear as an encroaching menace.

It is said in these advices that several conflicts have already occurred between the soldiers and the people and that the Japanese have been driven entirely from the towns of Hop Gi Bin and En Tat Hop Gi.

HAS SEVEN WIVES, BUT SEEKS ANOTHER ON SHIP.

"Will You Marry Me, Quick?"

His Greeting to Ambassador's Daughter—Attendants Apologize to Father.

By Rose Tillotson.

"Off again, on again, gone again." The immortal words of Finnigan might be aptly applied to the flying visit of His Highness the Nawab Sultan Ul-Mulk Bahadur of Hyderabad, Decatur, India, who was soon on his way after his arrival in New York yesterday, with retinue, en route to London, to be attended by alienists. The Nawab is a sick man, and with his suite of nine sailed from Yokohama, Japan, for San Francisco on Jan. 29.

The mandate of His Highness's uncle, ruler of Hyderabad, ordered the greatest haste, and the mystery surrounding the journey aroused much uneasiness in the British and Japanese governments.

A Sudden Proposal.

All invitations intended to honor the Prince in the Mikado's realm were declined. The trip was begun under orders to spare no expense and break all records, and His Highness is doing it. He reached San Francisco Feb. 14 and left for England to-day on the Baltic.

Dr. Arthur Chamarette, an Englishman, detached from the English service at Hyderabad to accompany the Nawab, says the latter suffers from hallucinations, and it is necessary to reach England, where physicians who have known the Prince from childhood may treat him. The Nawab believes he is the prophet Ebn, the Mohammedan name for Jesus, reincarnated, and has set a ritual of worship and rule of conduct for his followers.

Although he has seven wives at Hyderabad, said to be the fairest in the land, he is very impressionable. On the Korean way to San Francisco, he met the Count de Amberg, Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to Tokio and the latter's wife and daughter.

Marie de Amberg was walking on the deck one morning when the Indian Prince approached and asked: "Will you marry me? Quick!"

Invitations Declined.

The young lady fled to her father's stateroom. When the Prince's attendants learned of his action they were profuse in their apologies. The Prince left his own country Oct. 12 to travel leisurely, when orders came for the trip to London. A fall from a horse two years ago, during military maneuvers, is given as the cause of his present illness. The Prince's suite consists of Dr. Chamarette, Dr. Mahomed Ashraf, Captain Surgeon of the Third Native Infantry; Capt. Ghouse Moulhudeen, treasurer of the journey; Raja Ismail, private secretary; the Prince's Secret-Major J. Baines, of the English Army, and three servants. The latter are Syed Kaja Meah, a dressing boy; Fookroodeen, body servant, and Ghousedeen, the private cook or "Nuberechee."

Feminine hearts, however, need not faint to flutter, nor designing mamma's with marriageable daughters prepare for bargaining days, because a new prince has come to town. The distinguished foreigner, though a really and truly prince, with a string of titles almost a yard long, is not an heir to an ancestral throne, but an abundant supply of wives—his life partners number seven—for the Nawab Sultan Ul-Mulk Bahadur of Hyderabad, as the new arrival is called, is an Indian potentate who believes matrimony is best conducted on the more the merrier plan.

Took Chef for Prince.

When the Chicago express pulled into the Grand Central at 4:15 yesterday, it was fully prepared to greet a dumpy vision graven in the usual phantasmagoria which adorn Eastern princes. As the stream of passengers poured forth from the incoming cars my eye caught the flaring red of an enormous turban which dangled from the head of a bewhiskered gentleman of ink-black complexion. Arrived in a kinnah of poodle hair, which fell just below his knees, with white linen trousers and red sandals completing the novel outfit, he stood on the water-soaked platform in all his Oriental splendor. I singled him out as the King of the Jungle and accosted him as such. But my friend of the turban gazed at me in amazement with not a trace of princely haughtiness on his coal-black face.

"I no Prince, I cook the Prince," he announced in broken English, swiveling a big bundle tied up in handkerchiefs over his broad shoulder. I gasped in amazement, owing to my limited acquaintance with East Indian royalties. I had made the dreadful faux pas of mistaking the chef for His Imperial Highness himself. If a mere King of the Jungle could be so mistaken, what chance had I?

HIS HIGHNESS NAWAB SULTAN UL-MULK BAHADUR

The Dshpan could be such a gorgeous apparition, what kind of a monstrous creature would the Sultan of Hyderabad be? More important looking personages in turbans and kinnah coats languidly strolled about in the rain, awaiting the coming of their Prince.

Frock Coat, Silk Hat.

At last he came, in a frock coat, silk hat and chic little gold-headed cane. I would never have believed that this dapper young person was the potentate from across the seas had not my friend the cook, with the rest of the retinue, bowed down in abject humility as their ruler stepped down from the train.

"Nawab Sultan Ul-Mulk Bahadur of Hyderabad," they all murmured in unison, while the turbans scraped and bowed way down to the watery platform. I bowed for the Prince and explained my mission as he made his way to the gates.

The Prince stopped short at my words. The retinue charged on us with open umbrellas to save the royal head and hat from the pouring rain. A blank expression, a mixture of boredom and unintelligence spread over the olive-tinted countenance of this Sultan of thirty-three.

"W-h-a-t?" he finally managed to murmur in a gasping tone. I gazed in astonishment and slowly repeated my words.

"W-h-a-t?" he drew out once more, while a stream of rain, dripping from the ends of the numerous umbrellas held over the royal head, madly danced down his high silk hat and was lost beneath his collar.

"Can't you read my thoughts?" the Prince plaintively asked, as I noticed the miniature water fall which dripped from the umbrellas.

There didn't seem much to read, even had I been able to perform the psychic feat, so I turned to his attendant, Dr. Chamarette, who for twenty-five years has been a resident of India, and asked him to explain.

"Not Well in Head."

"The Prince is not quite well here," and he touched his forehead with the tip of his finger. "Two years ago, while at military maneuvers, he fell from his horse and ever since he has not been in good health, and sometimes suffers from delusions. We are hurrying on to London—our visit to America has no political significance—in search of a specialist, where we hope to have him restored to health."

"I am Esau," broke in the Prince. "Not a Sultan, nor a Nanab, but just a human being, I am Esau."

"This is his latest delusion," Dr.

Chamarette hastened to explain. "We came to America by way of Japan, and while there the Prince one day saw an old man by the roadside reading a Bible. Up to that time he had been a Buddhist, but when he once read the Bible he immediately became possessed of the idea that he was the reincarnation of Esau. It has been his one topic ever since. He can talk of nothing else. We have seen but little of America, for our trip has been hurried, as we only desire to reach London as soon as possible."

The Prince understands, I think, what is said to him, but his speech is unintelligible, for he has lost almost completely the power to explain himself. We sail on the Baltic to-morrow."

"Can't you read my thoughts?" again broke in the Prince as I turned away. The suite rushed upon me, turbans wagging, kinnahs flapping, and each and every one buzzing in my ear. "Did he speak to you?" they demanded in awestruck tones, as if I had been the recipient of an unheard-of honor. I took one look at the black, shining faces, the flowing garments and Oriental head-dresses, and fled to the subway.

DOCTOR ACCUSED OF CRUELTY TO SICK SISTER

Pittsburg Physician Arrested on a Charge of Beating Woman.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 20.—Dr. Henry Marlyn Hall, Jr., one of the most prominent physicians of the fashionable East End, has been arrested at Ohio Pyle, a summer resort in Fayette County, charged with cruelly treating his sister, Miss Caroline Hall. Dr. Hall is a brother of Robert C. Hall, a millionaire financier of this city, partner of C. M. Schwab and president of the Pittsburg Stock Exchange. He is known throughout the country as a philanthropist, and was the founder of the Retreat for Consumptives in this city. His sister, Miss Caroline Hall, is one of the foremost kindergarten workers of Pittsburg. She is thirty-seven years old.

In the information it is alleged that Dr. Hall took his sister from Pittsburg to Ohio Pyle on Dec. 5, where he engaged quarters for her at the home of Mrs. Annie Mitchell. It is charged that she was under the influence of drugs when taken there. He visited her twice afterward, and it is alleged that on these occasions he beat her with a heavy trunk strap, put a straitjacket on her and placed a gag in her mouth. It is also alleged that on another occasion he tied her hands across her breast, bound her ankles with ropes and, with scarcely any clothing on her, placed her out in the snow. Dr. Hall gave bail for $1,000 for his appearance at court. It is asserted by friends of Dr. Hall that his sister suffered from a peculiar nervous trouble and that Dr. Hall had her under a course of treatment. It is likewise said that Miss Hall will shortly withdraw the charges made against her brother.

GILLETTE'S HOPE IS NEW GOVERNOR

Murderer of Grace Brown. Seeing No Use in Appeal to Hughes, Urges Delay.

(Special to The Evening World.)
AUBURN, Feb. 20.—"I am of the opinion that there will be no use in appealing to Gov. Hughes for a pardon," said Chester Gillette this morning, to his sixteen-year-old sister Lucille, in the condemned cell of Auburn Prison. "I believe," he continued, "that the best policy would be for Mr. Mills to try and secure a stay of proceedings until a new Governor comes into office, as I believe that Mr. Hughes is opposed to interference with the working of the law."

HEGEMAN HELD, BUT RELEASED ON HABEAS CORPUS

Higher Court to Settle Question of "Criminal Intent" in High Finance.

In order to secure a decisive legal opinion upon the liability of presidents of corporations for statements prepared by employees for submission to the public or to State or city officers, John R. Hegeman, President of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, submitted himself to arrest to-day. He was arraigned in Centre Street Police Court and immediately released on a writ of habeas corpus issued by Supreme Court Justice Platzeck.

Mr. Hegeman was indicted last May for forgery and perjury in connection with statements made by his company to the State Superintendent of Insurance. These statements, signed and sworn to by Mr. Hegeman as president of the corporation, were alleged to be false in certain particulars.

Justice Dowling later dismissed the forgery indictment, but permitted the perjury indictment to stand. The decision was not satisfactory to District Attorney Jerome, who believed that the forgery indictments should not have been dismissed, nor to former Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, Mr. Hegeman's counsel, who believed that the perjury indictment should have been quashed with the others.

By agreement between Mr. Jerome and Judge O'Brien, Mr. Hegeman submitted himself to arrest. He was arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan in the privacy of the District Attorney's office, and held on charges of forgery in the third degree and perjury. Justice Platzeck heard arguments in the habeas corpus proceedings this afternoon. His decision will be appealed to the Court of Appeals. The object is to clear up the doubt existing about "criminal intent," which has cut such a figure in the District Attorney's investigation of modern methods of finance.
